Jim,

Here is a draft letter for the Director's dinner for the 31st. I am not sure if this is what you had in mind, but it's something for you to fuss with. Let me know if there are any ways in which I can help with the arrangements for the dinner.

LETTER FOR DCI DINNER

Dear ,

As you may know, I have at intervals brought together representatives of the foreign policy community and academia for informal dinner discussions of topics of current interest. We have found these meetings to be stimulating and mutually beneficial, often bringing new perspectives to bear on problems that have been bedeviling us all.

One of the thrusts I have been attempting to impart to NFAC assessments is to make them truly interdisciplinary. In addition to integrating political, economic, and strategic analysis, behavioral and personality analysis has often added an extra dimension to our assessments. We thought it would be useful to consider the role of personality in political analysis at one of our dinner discussions, but rather than consider this topic in the abstract, to take a particular case example.

There is perhaps no area of the world in which personality plays a greater role in leadership behavior than the Near East. I would very much like to have the pleasure of your company for dinner on the evening of May 31st. The topic for discussion will
